Person:
Date:

13/ next year. Other Mormon camps, towns and shared towns in Nebraska were the encampment of 100 to 200 Mormons with the Ponca Indians in the winter of 1846

1847 near where the Niobrara River empties into the Missouri River; Wyoming, six or seven miles north of Nebraska City and Genoa, west of Fremont. Although all three of these latter towns or camps had interesting histories, none of them shared in the watershed role of the original Mormon towns, transforming the face of the land and the way of life in southwest

Iowa and east central Nebraska.
