14/ In addition to the prodigious building programs of the Mormons and the highly organized and duly constituted civic, school and church programs they established, the Mormons engineered what was to become the primary trade and emigration route into the American West. The impact was far greater in SW Iowa than in Nebraska because all territory west of the Missouri River was then officially designated by Congress as Indian Territory. Therefore, most of the towns and duly organized government were on the Iowa side of the river. But those served as launching
